

Today there are nearly 200 Arab American-owned businesses on Warren Avenue alone, and about half are food-related businesses. The majority of the food related businesses (bakeries, restaurants, grocery stores, butcher shops, produce markets, roasters and kitchen supply stores) are owned by Lebanese Americans, though some Iraqis, Palestinians, Yemenis, Jordanians and Syrians also have businesses along Warren Avenue.

In East Dearborn, both sides of the main streets (Warren Avenue, Michigan Avenue, Greenfield Road and Schaefer Road) are lined with hundreds of Arab American-owned businesses: cafes and restaurants, pharmacies, grocery stores, butcher shops, coffee and nut roasters, bakeries, clothing stores, hair salons, and doctor's offices. Because of the prominence of Arab American food businesses in Dearborn, it is a natural gathering place for Arabs and non-Arabs alike—breaking bread together.

Within two generations, Arab Americans became the majority in the South End and Warren Avenue, Schaefer Road and others, from stretches of mostly vacant store fronts to were established along Dix and Vernor.

End took on a distinctly Arab American flavor, as grocery stores, restaurants and mosques and Detroit. As more and more Lebanese, Syrians and Yemenis began settling in the South End of Dearborn (followed later by smaller numbers of Palestinians and Iraqis), the South Ford opened the Rouge factory and Arab American workers moved from Highland Park Dearborn became a hub of the Arab American community in the late 1920s when Henry American neighbors through food. Food is often the first exposure that people have to different cultures. Dearborn is the center of Arab American food culture in Michigan.

ABOUT THE ARAB AMERICAN NATIONAL MUSEUM

THE ARAB AMERICAN NATIONAL MUSEUM (AANM) documents, preserves and presents the history, culture and contributions of Arab Americans. Since opening in Dearborn, Michigan, U.S.A., in 2005 – amid the largest concentration of Arabs in the U.S. – AANM has remained the only institution among America's 17,500 museums to focus on Arab Americans. The AANM also brings to light the shared experiences of immigrants and ethnic groups, paying tribute to the diversity of our nation.

Arab Americans, like many other ethnic groups, have often used food to preserve their culture and share it with others. The AANM's Yalla Eat! Culinary Walking Tours continue this tradition.

For over a century, immigrants from the Arab World have brought with them their foods, practices and traditions.

Food is the most common way that we interact with and learn about other cultures.

All cultures express themselves through their cuisine: the ingredients, the recipes, the variety of dishes, how it is served and consumed.

ABOUT FOOD AND CULTURE

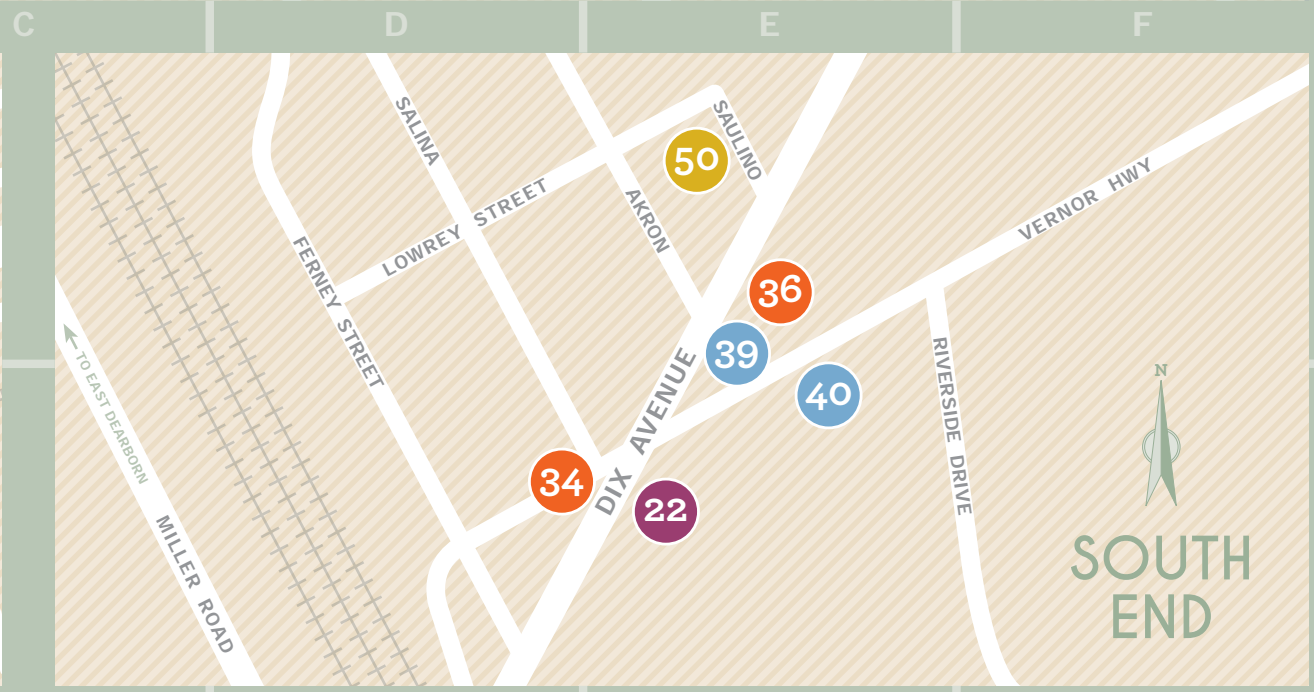

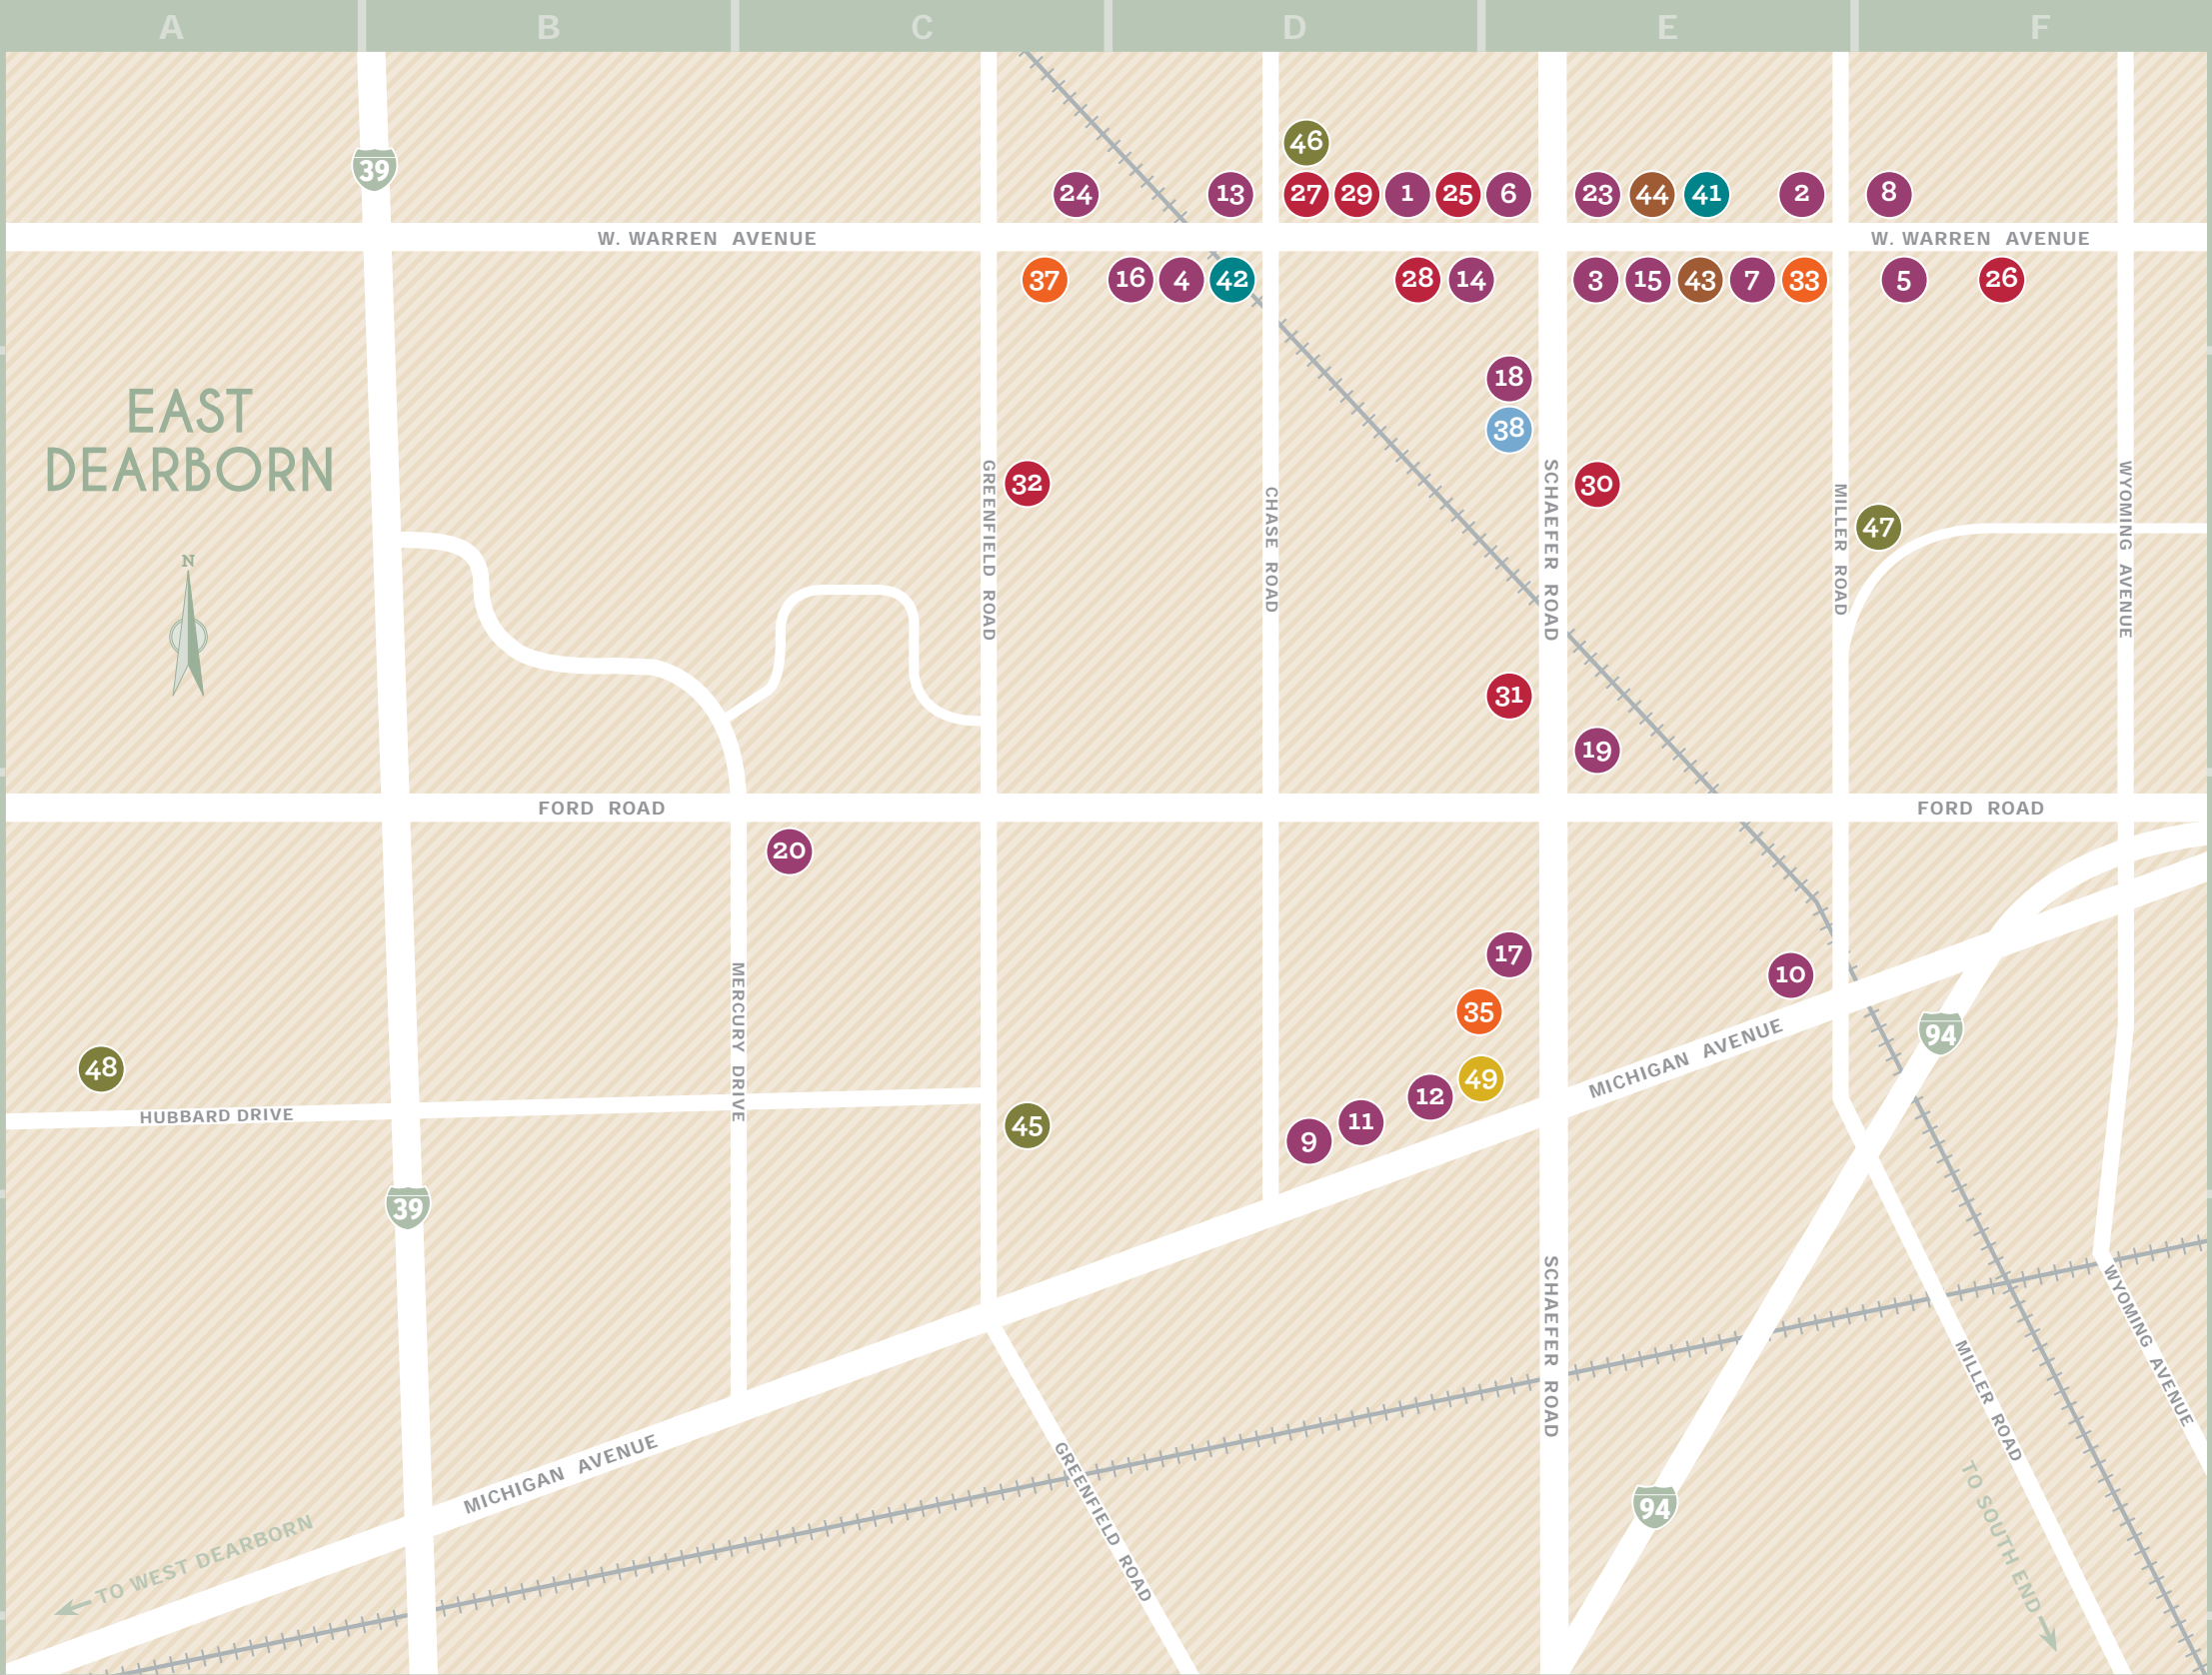

ABOUT YALLA EAT! CULINARY WALKING TOURS

YALLA EAT! (Yalla is Arabic for "Let's go") is not only the title of this map; it's an immersive experience offered by the Arab American National Museum (AANM) that examines how Arab American ethnic identity is created and shared through food. Guided by AANM docents, participants explore the culinary contributions of the country's most concentrated Arab American population, while learning about the history and impact of the Arab American community on metro Detroit. Come with an appetite – the free samples are plentiful and the walking tour helps burn the calories!

FOR INFORMATION ABOUT UPCOMING YALLA EAT! culinary walking tours, visit www.arabamericanmuseum.org/yallaeat or call 313.582.2266 during regular Museum hours.

ABOUT HALAL FOODS

ARAB AMERICAN FOOD BUSINESSES in Dearborn cater to the large Muslim population in the area by offering halal foods. Halal refers to the religious proscriptions for preparation and consumption of certain foods, similar to kosher.
